ARGENTINE.

Summary of Certain Facts About a Sister Republic in South America.

—The first tramway line was established in Buenos Aires, in 1868. Now the city is crossed and recrossed by tramways, and in 1891, they carried over sixty million passengers.

—The Argentine people are fond of the race track. During the first eleven months of 1891, there were 833 races run on the two race tracks of Buenos Aires. The attendance was 1,500,000 people.

—Congress has passed laws pensioning officials in their old age, when their lives have been spent in the service of the government, and the civil pension list is not a small one.

—The University of Buenos Aires, established in 1822, and the College of Cordova, are the Republic's two oldest centres of learning and are the only ones that confer degrees for the practice of the liberal professions. There is a naval academy and a military academy from which all officers of the navy and army graduate.

—In 1806, England then at war with Spain, decided to take possession of Buenos Aires, then a city of 40,000 population. The English army numbered 3,000 soldiers under Lord Beresford, but within two months after their arrival, the British were beaten back, losing half their number in killed and prisoners. General Liniers commanded the natives.

—The first cry of independence was raised by the people in the early part of 1810, during Napoleon's occupation of Spain by Napoleon. The populace of Buenos Aires assembled in the public square under the leadership of noted patriots. On the 9th of July, 1816, a congress in which the provinces were represented declared their independence and separation from Spain.

In 1807, England sent a new army of 10,000 men, which landed near Buenos Aires. But the natives had prepared themselves for the assault and the British were completely routed, General Whitelock capitulating. The flag of the famous Seventy-first regiment, which gave Napoleon so much trouble in Egypt, is still in the Cathedral of Buenos Aires, with many others.

—The United States system of public schools was adopted by the Argentine Republic in 1868, and in 1884, block 40, original town for $1,500.

making education free and obligatory to all boys and girls between the ages of six and fourteen years. The number of these schools in the Republic in 1889, was 3,056. There were 2,322 male teachers, and 3,534 female teachers. The cost of tuition for each pupil was twelve dollars monthly. The number of private schools in 1891, was 754.

—Unlike the United States, where each state is divided into congressional districts, in Argentina each province constitutes an electoral district, sending as many representatives to congress as its population entitles it to. The people vote a list of candidates for congress. Senators hold office nine years; Representatives, four years; Governors of provinces cannot be elected senators or representatives, while holding office. In regard to the judiciary, the prescriptions are identical with ours.

—The president of the Argentine Republic, who is elected in precisely the same manner as in the United States, cannot be re-elected, and his term of office is six years. He has more power than our president as far as the making of appointments is concerned, but all his decrees, proclamations, etc., must be countersigned by a cabinet minister, else they are valueless. The members of the cabinet can answer questions and take part in the debates in the house or senate, although they are not members of either body.

—It will pay any man to come twenty miles for hardware, nails, or fence wire, or stoves if they buy at Hoffman Bros. Their prices and the quality of goods will convince you of the fact.

SHOT TO KILL.

A Sedalia Sensation in Which Several Society People Were Involved.

Alleged Injured Husband Makes A Plunge For Life—Frightfully Mangled.

Great excitement was created at the Union depot at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by an altercation between W. H. Hogg, department clerk of Division Superintendent G. H. Clark, of the Missouri Pacific railroad, and Porter H. Haley, late a traveling man from Chicago, who recently became connected with a Kansas City grocery firm.

A BAZOO representative was standing near the baggage room, just before the hour for the arrival of the 3:25 passenger train from St. Louis, when a mob of men and boys was seen surging toward the main entrance of the gentleman's waiting-room.

Somebody said, "a man has fallen out of a window."

Once inside the room the reporter saw a young man, bloody and reclining on one of the seats. A great throng of people had gathered around, among whom were policemen and physicians.

Rumors were rife, and of the wildest possible character. The young man, bleeding badly, was seated near the stove in the center of the room.

He had been found a few minutes before by Mr. T. G. Price, manager of the Union Depot News stand.

In a big pool of blood, face downward, and legs and arms outstretched, was Mr. Haley. There was a great, ugly pool of blood on the plank sidewalk and 30 feet directly overhead, a shattered window glass.

An investigation into the trouble by a BAZOO representative soon disclosed a story which is given, substantially, as follows, by Mr. Hogg:

About 3:15 o'clock in the afternoon a gentleman, whose name, as subsequently learned, is Porter H. Haley, called upon Mr. Hogg, at the union depot, and invited him into room No. 8, which is situated down the hall, on the second floor, to the west.

Mr. Hogg responded promptly to the summons that a gentleman desired to see him.

Upon stepping out of his room he was confronted by a gentleman who invited him to a private apartment No. 8. Upon entering that room, Mr. Haley, it is claimed, closed and locked the door.

Haley at once made known his mission. He told Hogg that he (Hogg) had been too intimate with his wife—that he was the cause of her downfall.

Mr. Hogg disclaimed any such charge. He told Haley that such was not the case, and there could be no foundation for an accusation of this kind.

High words were passed. Hogg said to Haley: "If you have any claim of that kind against me, let us have a third party present or let it be settled by legal process."

Of course, more words followed this, and Haley, who had held his hand in his left bosom all the time, suddenly drew forth a revolver.

Haley was then sitting directly in front of and almost against Hogg, who was sitting on an operator's table.

Instantly, upon Haley drawing the deadly weapon, Hogg sprang upon and grappled with him in deadly combat.

A large, broad table stood in the centre of the room. The two men, fighting for life, were clinched like tigers. Haley was the longer and larger. Hogg was the smaller but more muscular. Haley had the weapon in his hand, and was trying to use it; self-cocker, though it was, and loaded in all five chambers, it failed to do the deadly purpose.

Hogg, by almost superhuman strength, wrenched the revolver from his antagonist's hand, and both reached their feet at the same moment.

Hogg, as soon as he got possession of the revolver, attempted to hammer Haley over the head with it, but a line stretched in the room, on which were hung a lot of small articles, interfered, and his efforts in this direction were of no avail.

Mr. Hogg—and he says he doesn't know just how it happened—then fired at Haley. The latter anticipated this action, and, to escape, plunged headlong through the window and struck on the pavement 30 feet below.

The bullet entered the window frame, tearing an ugly hole therein. Haley was, after considerable trouble, attended by Doctor Dunlap and Doctor Steckman. His wounds were temporarily bandaged and he was conveyed, in a carriage, to 207 East Seventh street.

No person, authorized, was there to receive him and he was taken to Hotel Riley.

A BAZOO representative called there at five o'clock, but Drs. Dunlap and Steckman were busy at work dressing and bandaging his terrible injuries.

At 9 o'clock another visit was made. Mr. Haley had recovered consciousness, but was too feeble to make a statement to the public. He has promised to do this Monday.

Mrs. Haley, about whom the trouble originated, is the daughter of Mrs. Hutton Crater, for a time stenographer in J. J. Frey's office, of the M., K. & T. railroad. Mrs. Crater is now in Lafayette, Ind.

Mrs. Haley, who is quite intelligent and prepossessing, is the mother of two boys, one aged six years and one aged four years—beautiful children. She resided, during her stay here, with Mrs. T. K. Potter, at 207 East Seventh street. Her husband is also refined, intelligent and devoted to his family. Mrs. Haley left Sedalia last July, and since that time, until, recently, had been residing at Eufala, I. T., when she went to Chillicothe, Mo.

Mr. Hogg is one of the most prominent and popular young men in Sedalia. He has a legion of friends.

He regrets, exceedingly, the unfortunate occurrence, and thinks that he acted simply in self defense, in the whole matter.
